Digestive Health Check

Endoscopy for Preventive Health Screening

Digestive Diseases in the Philippines

The top 3 digestive diseases in the Philippines are cirrhosis of the liver, peptic ulcer disease, and pancreatitis. With advances in screening and early detection, these diseases can be cured before its advanced stages.

What is the difference between Transnasal Endoscopy & Gastroscopy?

Both are an effective way to screen and detect gastrointestinal health problems, but in essence, they differ in entry routes and preparation steps. Alternatively, Transnasal Endoscopy is highly recommended for patients who prefer better tolerance and convenience before, during, and after the procedure.

	Transnasal Endoscopy	Gastroscopy
Insertion	Nose	Mouth
Scope Size	5mm	10mm

Digestive Health Check is recommended for:

- Patients 30 years old and above who have never undergone endoscopy procedure
- Those who continue to have a heavy stomach, stomach pain, heartburn, or loss of appetite
- Those who have been pointed out to have anemia or have a rapid weight loss
- Those who have been positive for Helicobacter pylori in a health checkup
- Patients with a family history of gastrointestinal disorders, colon polyps and cancer

Why Choose Shinagawa

01

Training by Japanese Experts

Our medical team were given extensive training about latest procedures and information about endoscopy

FUJIFILM
Value from Innovation

02

Top-notch Endoscopy Machine

We use endoscope with multi-light technology for superior imaging and visibility

03

Enhanced Patient Comfort

We have introduced transnasal endoscopy, which is less likely to cause vomiting reflex (getting caught) and pain during and after the procedure.
